

HUMANITY: UNDERGRADUATE PROGRAM OUTCOMES (POs)

An undergraduate program in the field of humanities focuses on studying various aspects of human society, culture, history, languages and behaviour. While specific outcomes may vary depending on the program and institution, here are some common outcomes associated with an undergraduate program in the humanities:

PO1: Knowledge and Understanding: Graduates will have a comprehensive understanding of human society, culture, history, languages and the factors that shape human behaviour.

PO2: Cultural Awareness, Ethical Reasoning and Sensitivity: Graduates will be able to identify cultural diversity, ethical issues, consider moral perspectives, and engage in ethical reasoning and demonstrate sensitivity towards different perspectives and experiences.

PO3: Global and Linguistic Competence: Graduates will be proficient in understanding of global issues and expressing complex ideas through clear and effective written and oral communication.

PO4: Professional and Transferable Skills: Graduates will have acquired skills such as critical thinking, interdisciplinary thinking, research, communication, and cultural competency, which can be applied to various careers and professional settings.

PO5: Critical Thinking, Analysis and Research Skill: Graduates will be able to acquire primary research skills, including information gathering, data analysis etc. and critically analyse and evaluate diverse forms of human expression, such as literature, art, philosophy, and social phenomena.